BRED FOR GREAT PERFORMANCES

In the entire history of electric instruments, nobody has done as much to shape the sound of modern music as Fender. As a result, the guitars and amplifiers Fender designed are the most desired, and most copied musical tools of the 20th century.

In this brochure, you'll discover something truly unique: the first series of guitars and basses ever officially authorized to borrow Fender's classic designs. With the help of an international team of designers, musicians, and craftsmen, Squier's collection of instruments share the Fender legacy of brilliant sound, superior playability, and solid, dependable quality.

The design and production of Squier and Squier Bullet instruments is supervised by Fender's most experienced artisans. Everything from the selection of quality hardwoods to the winding of pickups—right down to the final setup of each instrument—must meet Fender's demanding specifications.

The best news of all is that these instruments are available for considerably less money than the classic Fenders that inspired them. Naturally, you won't find all the latest Fender innovations, or quite as much loving, time-consuming hand work, but if you've ever played a classic Fender, you'll recognize the family resemblance immediately!

Compare sound, compare fit and finish, compare prices—you'll discover that Squier means unbeatable value in your next guitar or bass!

Squier Stratocaster®

The new Squier Stratocaster faithfully captures the sound and spirit of the world's most popular electric guitar—an instrument that has reigned unchallenged since its introduction almost three decades ago. The three single-coil pickups, the fast action, the sensuous body shape, and the ringing, knife-edged sound—all are inspired by the immortal Stratocaster. Modern touches include the larger headstock, three-bolt neck attachment, and an updated 5-position switch that allows selecting the middle pickup in combination with either the bridge or neck pickup.

With a body shaped of solid, select hardwoods finished in gleaming black or white, and your choice of classic Maple or Rosewood fretboard, a Squier Stratocaster is an instrument that anybody from student to professional can play with pride.

Squier Telecaster®

A surprisingly faithful re-creation of the instrument that started it all—the renowned Telecaster. The first production solid-body guitar, the Tele has remained one of the most consistently popular instruments among rock and country guitarists for almost 40 years.

Today's Squier Telecaster guitar isn't merely shaped like the original—it's designed to sound as steely and soulful as well. Two single-coil pickups—one for lush, mellow rhythm tones and the other producing the Tele's trademark screaming lead sound—can be used separately or together for an amazing variety of sonic colors.

With a hardwood body finished in black or richly-grained blonde, mated with the heavily chromed hardware and classic one-piece rock maple neck, the Squier Tele captures the beauty as well as the sound of this modern-day classic. An unbeatable value for the connoisseur of classic Fenders!

Squier Bullet®

Start with shapes and sounds borrowed from the great Fender guitars. Add some special design touches all their own. Then offer the result at amazingly affordable prices. Squier's Bullet guitars redefine the meaning of "value" in electric guitars.

All Bullet guitars feature Stratocaster-style body shapes (in Black or Sunburst finish) combined with one-piece rock maple necks patterned after the Telecaster. Precision tuning machines assure smooth, slip-free tuning, while the adjustable bridge and neck truss rod make it easy to set your Bullet up for any string gauge and playing style.

Model S-3 offers three single-coil pickups in the traditional Stratocaster arrangement, with or without tremolo. The Bullet H-2 offers the unique versatility of two humbucking pickups, each switchable to single-coil operation. Both are finely constructed, easy-playing winners!

THERE'S MAGIC IN THE BREED

Squier makes the sound and feel of Fender's most successful bass guitars available for remarkably little money. You get a choice of two finely-crafted instruments, incorporating many of the features that have made Fender basses the standard since the very beginning.

Squier basses use the same neck dimensions and split pickup design as the original Fender P-Bass. Result: both have a rich, singing tone and easy playability reminiscent of that classic instrument. Nothing else in their class even comes close!

Squier Precision Bass®

The Squier Precision Bass is styled after Fender's '60s versions with a solid hardwood body in your choice of Black or Sunburst, with a hardrock maple neck, capped with a dot-inlaid rosewood fretboard. A beautiful execution of the legendary P-Bass design.

Squier Bullet® B-34 Bass

The Squier Bullet B-34 Bass is a full-size (34" scale) instrument in the great Fender bass tradition. Solid Black or Sunburst body, with one-piece maple neck.
